Spend the holidays at the beach: American Airlines adds more flights from PHX for holiday travel

Phoenix's largest airline to offer 50% more seats to Florida compared to last winter

FORT WORTH, Texas – American Airlines is preparing for a record-setting winter holiday travel period with more flights than ever before. The airline announced today it is offering new service between Phoenix (PHX) and Fort Lauderdale, Florida (FLL).

In addition to the new FLL service, American is adding more flights from PHX to Tampa (TPA) and Miami (MIA). Beginning Dec. 18, the airline will offer a third daily departure between PHX and TPA, and a seventh daily departure between PHX and MIA. This complements previously announced service between PHX and Fort Myers, Florida (RSW) that begins in December.

“At American, our customers are at the center of everything we do, and we know they value the opportunity to travel for the holidays. These new flights reflect our commitment to design a network that provides local travelers with more service to the places they want to go,” said Sophia Philis-Ortiz, Vice President of American’s PHX Operation. “With our continued growth at Sky Harbor, we’re excited to add more top destinations, more service during peak travel periods, and build upon a decades-long partnership with the Phoenix community to be the valley’s main choice for air travel.”

Take Flight from Phoenix to Florida

With a focus on Florida, American is delivering for its customers want to vacation on the beach this winter. During the winter travel period, American will provide PHX customers:

- Up to 16 daily flights between PHX and Florida
- 50% more seats compared to last year. A record-setting 315 daily departures from PHX.
- New service to FLL and RSW this winter.
- Seven daily flights to MIA, the airline’s international gateway with an industry-leading network to Mexico, the Caribbean and Latin America.

New flights are now available for booking at aa.com or the mobile app.
